● PLACES TO EXPLORE

Copenhagen

1.229.370 pop.

Copenhagen, the capital of Denmark, lies on the eastern coast of the island of Zealand. Strategically situated on the Øresund Strait, it connects the Baltic Sea with the North Sea. Its flat landscape, criss-crossed by canals and dotted with extensive parks, invites visitors to explore its wonders, such as Amalienborg Palace and the Little Mermaid.

Aarhus

233.587 pop.

Aarhus, situated on the east coast of Jutland, Denmark, enjoys a privileged coastal location with access to the Baltic Sea. Its landscape combines urban areas with green spaces and proximity to nature. Among its highlights are the old town, with its historic houses; the ARoS Museum, with its famous 'Your Rainbow Panorama'; and Den Gamle By (The Old Town), a museum at

Odense

130.258 pop.

Odense is situated on the Danish island of Funen, at the mouth of the River Odense Å. Its flat, fertile landscape contrasts with its cultural offerings. A particular highlight is the Hans Christian Andersen Museum, which evokes the magic of his stories. The historic centre, with its cobbled streets and colourful houses, invites you to explore.

Ribe

8.187 pop.

Ribe is situated on the west coast of Jutland, a region characterised by its flat landscape and proximity to the North Sea. This ancient town, one of the country's most historic, offers a fascinating journey into the Viking and medieval past. Its cobbled streets and well-preserved houses invite you to explore its treasures.

● GEOGRAPHY OF DENMARK

Jutland Peninsula

The Jutland Peninsula is characterised by its gentle terrain and extensive forests. Its location makes it a strategic point, encompassing most of Denmark's mainland and serving as a natural bridge between Europe and Scandinavia.

Greenland

Greenland, the world's largest island, is strategically situated between the Arctic Ocean and the Atlantic Ocean. Its vast expanse, largely covered by an immense ice cap, defines its extreme geography and its vital importance to Denmark, not only because of its resources, but also because of its geostrategic and political significance in the Arctic.

Sea and straits

Denmark has historically been a maritime power due to its strategic geography. Its archipelago, comprising numerous islands and straits, gave it control of the passage between the North Sea and the Baltic Sea. Consequently, both then and now, its economy and culture have been intrinsically linked to the sea.
